

Something needs to be done to bring G rated, wholesome TV back for families. We never have our television on after 5:30 because we fear what will be on. Many families are not that vigilant and their kids are being exposed to the basest and darkest side of humanity on a nightly basis. Most nighttime TV has to do with some kind of grisly murder or another. Can't we do better than that? Is this the only form of "entertainment" we appreciate these days? There is almost nothing on television (EXCEPT for PBS) that I would want any child to watch. The commercials are not much better. Do something to reduce this kind of stuff on our airwaves! Our kids need to know there is a positive, uplifting and hopeful world out there.
